Abstract

The first grammar written by a Taiwanese linguist, Tung T'ung-ho, was published by the Institute of History and Philology, Academia Sinica 50 years ago in 1964. Fifty years later, the field has expanded, and the Institute of Linguistics (ILAS) is playing a greater role in this field than it has ever had.

In this talk, I will be talking about the past ten years of Formosan linguistics (2004-2014) at Academia Sinica, that represent ten years of expansion. To measure the work that has been accomplished, I will provide selected summaries on research studies carried out by ILAS colleagues, introduced by field of interest. I will also discuss very briefly academic activities that have been undergone during that period.
